

High school students explore medicine courses offered at CHS

The College of Health Sciences (CHS) stand at the 7th University of Nairobi (UoN) Open Day attracted many high school students who are interested in pursuing medicine courses after finishing high school.

The students had a chance to check out some of the courses offered by different schools at CHS in addition to getting a clear understanding of the career opportunities in the medical field.

The Open Day brings together UoN staff and students in addition to key players in the education sector.

During the event, prospective students, parents and guardians get a chance to interact with both teaching and non teaching University staff, and receiving information on a wide range of courses offered at the University. Those interested in joining the institution have an opportunity to apply for the course of their choice on the spot through the online application system for self sponsored students.

This year's event is organized by UoN in partnership with the Nation Media Group. Other partners include Gionee, a smart phone company, and University of Nairobi Enterprises and Services.

The three day fete at the Main Campus will end on May 27, 2017.
